

AbstractImprovements in and Relating to Wireless Communication Devices

A telecommunication network is described in which information relating to 5 access to resources such as the world wide web, may be transferred between wireless communication terminals at least one of which is a client of a server connected to the network and providing access to the resources. A method of transfer and a terminal suitable therefor are described.

10 Fig. 3.